REDS FIGHT TO SAVE KHARKOV

5 TOP-RANKERS CHECK USE OF U. S. MANPOWER

Prepare Initial Report While Congressional Furor on Size of Forces Grows.

STIMSON CHALLENGES

War Secretary Says Civilians Seek to Avoid Sacrifices War Effort Demands.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Congressional furor over military expansion, deferment of farm workers and a civilian labor draft broke out on the entire manpower front today and brought the first move toward legislative restrictions on the size of the army.

As the controversy widened, a special White House committee of top ranking presidential consultants called a meeting to draft an initial report on how men and women best can be mobilized for war work.

The committee, composed of Harry Hopkins, James F. Byrnes, Admiral William D. Leahy, Bernard M. Baruch and Justice Samual I. Rosenman, meet amid persistent reports that the whole civilian war organization may be overhauled.

Members of a senate bloc opposed to increasing the armed forced to 10,800,000 this year on the ground it would absorb needed farm and industrial manpower, disclosed plans to submit a resolution directing the appropriations committee to refuse funds for army enlargement.

The measure, authorized by Senators Bankhead (D., Ala.), Nye (R., N. D.) and Thomas (D., Okla.) would compel cutting the army's projected size of 8,200,000 by approximately 2,000,000.

Other manpower developments:

1. An assertion by Secretary of War Simson that foes of army expansion are trying to avoid "inconveniences and relatively minor sacrifices."

2. A senate battle over the type of legislation desired to defer farm workers from military service.

3. An effort by Senator Wheeler (D., Mont.) to attach a rider to the farm deferment legislation eliminating induction of fathers over 38.

4. Renewal of hearings on the Austin-Wadsworth national service bill amid predictions of opponents that congress "will not

BIG TAX DAY

Treasurer's Office Swamped as Deadline Arrives.

Real estate owners were numerous and mail was exceptionally heavy in the office of the Richland county treasurer today as the last day arrived for payment of real estate taxes.

First 12 letters opened this morning revealed a total payment of $60,000 which indicated mail today and tomorrow would run the total into the hundred thousand figures.

So rushing was the collection business that County Treasurer Charles Payne and his associates found it impossible to take time enough away from the customers to record the checks in the mail, other than to ascertain if the big stack of letters contained checks or inquiries. The inquiries were answered promptly while bulk of the letters, which contained checks, were stored in the vault for future tabulation.

NEW YORK —(AP)— Madame Chiang Kai-shek, refusing to follow physicians' advice that she abandon her transcontinental tour, will begin the trip in about a week instead of tomorrow as originally planned.

The postponement, announced by a member of her entourage, was described as a compromise between Mme. Chiang's determination to appear in Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Ottawa, and physicians' wishes that she terminate her tour now.

AILING BANKER HOLDS HIS OWN

J. P. Morgan, Giant of World of Finance, Suffers Heart Attack in Florida.

BULLETIN

BOCA GRANDE, Fla. —(AP)— A "slight but definite improvement" in the condition of financier J. P. Morgan who is suffering from a recurrence of an old heart ailment, was reported by his representatives today.

(By Associated Press)

BOCA GRANDE, Fla. — John Pierpont Morgan, whose name is synonymous with gigantic financial power, apparently was holding his own today at this resort where he suffered a recurrence of an old heart ailment.

The latest word from Gasparilla Inn, where three doctors are attending the 75 year-old international banker, was from Jack Velelly, the manager, who said Morgan was resting easily, although his condition continued grave.

It was a week after he had been stricken that the first news of Morgan's illness was made public yesterday in a New York bulletin from famed 23 Wall street, where his simple desk is the hub of huge financial enterprises.

The bulletin said Morgan had been in a critical condition but had shown improvement.

Indications that Morgan was making progress came from the fact that his son, Henry Sturgis Morgan, had left Boca Grande after visiting his father.

Still at the bedside, however, is Mrs. George Nichols, Morgan's daughter. Morgan came here two weeks ago.

Long Lines Form At Postoffice to File Tax Returns

Long lines continued to form at the internal revenue office in the postoffice today as Mansfielders hurried to meet the March 15 deadline for filing out income returns.

Workers on off-shifts, housewives, and even mail carriers await their turn at the revenue office for assistance in filing their returns.

Deputy collectors said that the rush of the past week indicates that few Mansfielders will be "caught short" by the time the deadline for tax payments arrives Monday. The money order window at the postoffice, where payments are made, was experiencing a similar rush in activity.

BLACK-OUT TO FOLLOW CITY'S DIM-OUT TESTS

State Announces Richland To Be Included in Area Alert Late in March.

SECOND TEST SUCCESS

Defense Chiefs Praise Down Town Performance; New One Tonight at 9.

Mansfield's currently sectional dim-out tests and next week's city-wide test are preparatory to a district black-out test, including Richland county, which will be conducted late this month by the war department and the state defense council, Office of Civilian Defense officials here were advised today.

Tonight's dim-out will cover the area extending south from the center of Park avenue east and east of the center of South Main street, within the corporate limits of the city.

Police Captain Jesse J. Schwab, defense commander, applauding the response of commercial, industrial and residential tenants in the southwest and northwest sections Monday and Tuesday nights, warned Mansfielders against turning on lights when the second siren alert signal sounds a few minutes after the steadily toned warning signal at 9 p. m.

"Some householders have unintentionally flashed on lights on the second signal," Schwab said today. "The warning siren means all lights must be shut off. The wailing siren is employed to educate the public that this modulated warning is the signal that enemy planes are approaching or are overhead. Lights must remain off until the third siren sound—a steady tone signalling "all clear."

Under new federal regulations, Schwab said, it may be necessary to install some public address method of signalling the departure of attacking forces before an "all clear" notice is given, since history of bombed areas show that enemy planes often return to strike again at an unwary area.

On Tuesday night half of Mansfield's business district blacked out instantly when the warning sirens signalled a simulated air raid. Squads of city police, auxiliary police and air wardens

MART TUMBLES

Hog Prices Drop 70 Cents on Ceiling Order News.

With indications that an immediate ceiling of around $15 top, will be placed on the price of live hogs, market prices took a decided drop today.

In the Mansfield area, Swift and company prices at the Galion market were 70 cents beneath yesterday's quotations.

Top on the Galion market, offered for hogs of the 180-250 lb. weight class, was $14.80 today as against $15.50 yesterday.

This reduction was in line with the report that the government will force a reduction in live hog prices allowing, at the same time, a slight increase in corn prices in an effort to pry loose some of the feed grain needed by livestock producers. The reduction in hog prices was expected to approximate about $1.50 per hundred pounds below recent top prices.

CASH POURING INTO RED CROSS

War Fund Workers Running Behind in Count—While Contributions Mount.

Richland county's Red Cross officials today found themselves in the happy predicament of being unable to count their annual roll call contributions as rapidly as the cash poured in.

Tuesday's reports of $3,739 swelled the total to date to $26,325 and officials and workers were confident of attaining Mansfield's goal of $45,500 before the scheduled closing of the campaign March 15. Yesterday's receipts included a 100 per cent response from municipal employes, as reported by Robert Black, city clerk.

Returns from many of Mansfield's manufacturing concerns are still to come in, L. W. Birch, campaign chairman, said today.

Quota for Richland county is $59,000 and outlying districts have given ample assurance of success. Of the total, $19,000 remains at home for various Red Cross activities, the balance going to national headquarters for carrying out a many-fold war program.

DISASTER ENDS ARMY MISSION

Transport Plane Bearing French Officers Wrecked In Crash.

LONDON —(INS)— A mission representing Gen. Honor Giraud to the middle east, to establish closer relations with the fighting French forces of Gen. Charles DeGaulle, has ended in disaster, a dispatch from Beirut disclosed today.

Two of Gen. Giraud's emissaries were aboard a transport plane which crashed a Terrissage airdrome, the dispatch stated. One French officer identified as Colonel Baril, was killed in the forced landing. A General Mast was seriously injured.

Boy Confesses He Killed Sister, 6, Who Was 'Noisy'

FLINT, Mich. —(U.P.)— John W. May, 16-year old son of war-working parents today confessed that he tortured and murdered his six-year- old sister Emmogene because "she was so awfully noisy."

As soon as he finished a detailed admission of the slaying to Prosecutor John I. Roach, he went whistling and singing to his cell.

Roach said the youth admitted taking indecent liberties and that he had changed an earlier confession in which he said he killed her because he was jealous.

"In the last month or so I had gotten used to quiet and she comes in and she was so awfully noisy," he said in the normal confession.

"I tied her wrists together behind her back with a rawhide thong. Then I gagged her and shot her three times."

Two of the RCAF attacks on the U-boats were made during heavy snowstorms and results were uncertain, Power said.

M'Arthur Says Raid Failed To Inflict Serious Damage at Wau, New Guinea.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA — Reinforced Japanese air power launched a formidable assault on the Allied base at Wau, on the northeast coast of New Guinea, but failed to seriously damage the airfield there, a communique from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters reported today.

The raiding squadron was made up of 26 bombers and 21 Zero fighters.

A single Allied heavy bomber, on a reconnaissance flight over Gasmata, on the south shore of New Britain island, was attacked by nine enemy fighters. Four of the enemy planes were shot down and a fifth damaged. The Allied plane returned safety to its base.

Police Hold Two Boys In Suspected Burglary Attempt

After police last night found a painter's sling suspended from the roof of the Roth building, which houses the L. A. Ott Jewelry store and other firms, on Park avenue west, two boys recently involved in gasoline station robbery probes admitted they were the pair seen earlier trespassing on fire escapes of the structure.

Almost coincident with the Roth building report, turned in to police headquarters by a federal office employe watching from a window, came a report that prowlers were tampering with rear doors and windows of the Lautshaugh drug store.

The boys were taken into custody by Patrolmen John Steel and Don Mitchell while in possession of bicycles reported stolen from the Y. M. C. A. by Robert and Claude Mann, Burger avenue, Roseland. They were kept in custody at the Salvation Army citadel last night.

The two boys were released to their parents and two companions were probated to a church official two weeks ago after the latter pair admitted leading forays against cash boxes of a filling station here and one in Mt. Vernon. A fifth youngster was exonerated.

Russians Rally After Suffering Sharp Setback

Battle 375,000 Fresh Nazi Troops on Southern Front After Being Driven Back 100 Miles and Losing Eight Key Cities.

BULLETIN

MOSCOW—(U.P.)—Russian forces were closing in from three directions on the central front stronghold of Vyazma today and beating off strong German attacks aimed at Kharkov.

(By Associated Press)

Swept back 100 miles with the loss of eight key cities, Russia's armies battled desperately to save Kharkov, the great prize of their 112-day-old winter offensive today as Adolf Hitler threw approximately 375,000 troop reinforcements into a counter drive against Kharkov and the Upper Donets river valley.

On the Tunisian front, Allied headquarters reported that Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's British 8th army had begun sharp patrol forays all along the 60-mile Mareth line in southern Tunisia after crushing six Axis counterattacks.

With Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's forces drawn back into the hills behind the Mareth works, hard hit by the loss of 52 tanks, it appeared that Gen. Montgomery was preparing to take the offensive and that a climactic assault on the Mareth defense system was near.

A communique from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters said Allied patrols were also "extremely active in northern Tunisia, particularly in the Sedjenane sector, 35 miles west of the big Axis naval base at Bizerte.

"Fierce battles in which the German Fascist troops are suffering tremendous losses in men and material, especially in tanks, are continuing in the district to the south and west of Kharkov," Soviet headquarters announced.

The Germans yesterday claimed they had stormed back to a point 12 miles due west of Kharkov, the "Soviet Pittsburgh," which the Russians recaptured last Feb. 16.

News of the Red army's grave setback, imperilling the center of a 400-mile front from Orel to Rostov, was frankly acknowledged by the Russian command, which declared, however, that the Germans had lost 20,000 killed since the end of February.

While the situation was undoubtedly critical, military analysts saw no signs of a major Soviet collapse—nor did the Germans make such a claim themselves.

Italian dispatches to Switzerland said Hitler had been able to transfer 340,000 troops from France to Russia because the Allies had not established a "second front."

The eight lost cities marking the 100-mile trail of Soviet retreat were listed by the Russian command as Pavlograd, only 35 miles from the Dnieper river bend; Krasnograd, Lozovaya, Krasnoarmeisk, Kramatorsk, Barvenkovo, Slavyansk and Lisichansk.

There were also indications that the Russians were in danger

DOUBLE: Allies Continue To Threaten Nazis In Africa

(By United Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, NORTH AFRICA — A double threat to Marshal Erwin Rommel's position in south-central Tunisia developed today as patrols from the British Eighth army continued to harass the Axis from the south and French troops, pushing east of Tozeur, menaced the German flank.

Large-scale fighting died down all along the Tunisian front and bad weather hampered the aerial activity in which the Allies gradually are winning control of the skies.

Rommel, badly battered in his sally from the Mareth Line against the Eighth army, showed no disposition to return to the attack. He lost 52 tanks in the week-end fighting in the south and it was believed he was trying to regroup his armor.

(The German-controlled radio Vichy said American forces in central Tunisia "continued their advance after the Germans had evacuated several positions in accordance with a plan to shorten their line").

French forces were moving along the northwest edge of Chott Djerid (Salt Lake) in central Tunisia, an area in which it is difficult for tanks to operate. They were using armored cars, however, and if they can continue their advance they will constitute a serious threat to Gafsa, toward which the Germans retreated after their defeat in the Kasserine Pass.

Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, commander of the Eighth army, was reported to be well satisfied with the result of the week-end fighting and with the positions now held by his forces. There are between six weeks and two months of good fighting weather in southern Tunisia, ample time for Montgomery to get a full-scale offensive under way.

CRADLE: British Bombs Hit Munich, Nazi Party Birthplace

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—Britain's biggest bombers took to the air last night to blast Munich, cradle of the Nazi party and seat of important war industries, in the 12th RAF assault upon the continent in 14 nights, it was announced today.

"Last night aircraft of the bomber command made a heavy attack on industrial objectives at Munich," a British air ministry communique said.

"Other aircraft bombed targets in western Germany and laid mines in enemy waters.

"Eleven of our aircraft are missing."

It was the second consecutive night stab of the day into southern Germany. The big British bombers made the 1,300-mile round trip raid to Munich after a heavy assault on Nuremberg Monday night in which Swiss press reports said the old center of that Nazi party stamping ground was razed.

The Germans in broadcasts early today admitted damage had been done in the Munich assault.

Canadians, who again participated strongly in the attack, said the entire heart of Munich appeared to be "one big fire" at one time, with one explosion shooting flames nearly 2,000 feet into the air and starting a column of fire visible for 60 miles despite other big fires around it.

"The flash lasted four or five seconds and that's a long time," said one of the Canadian pilots.

"The flash was so intense we could have read a newspaper in our kite and we were 20,000 feet up," said another.

Shrewd Maneuver Seen In Standley Comment on Lend-Lease Aid to Russia

FDR Seeks More Light On Reds' Post-War Plans, Belief.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Unofficial Washington is fairly well convinced today that President Roosevelt is shrewdly maneuvering for a public understanding with Premier Stalin on Russia's plans for peace and the post-war world.

The president's advisers maintain that the United Nations have agreed on principles with Stalin but thus far, Russia's plans for the future have been a complete mystery not only to the peoples of the world but to many governments.

It is recalled that Vice President Wallace has warned that unless there is a definite understanding between the United States, Britain and Russia, the seeds of a third world war will be sown. Hence, unofficial Washington believes that Admiral William H. Standley—the president's personal choice as ambassador to Moscow—bluntly questioned Stalin's gratitude over lend-lease aid as a step toward clarifying Russia's place in the post-war world. If Standley's act achieves such a goal, he will be well repaid for the rebukes administered to him by the state department and administration spokesmen in congress.

ADMIRAL STANDLEY

Envoy's Talk Brings Prompt Action By Moscow Radio.

It is pointed out that Stalin has played a lone hand in the war to date. He aroused some concern in other United Nations when he declined to attend the Roosevelt-Churchill conference in North Africa—pleading he was too busy fighting the war to leave Moscow. And again, two weeks ago, he told the Russian people that "the Red

Pitfalls of Love

Something in my father's voice froze" me to attention, and a lance at Katherine told me she lso was tensely alert.

"You mean," I faltered, as he id not go on, "that Steve has been urt, or is—"

"Neither hurt nor dead—worse uck," he said, then added harshly, eeing my shocked look, "Now on't let sentimentality obscure our common sense.

In all probability it ould save him from the electric hair. No, I don't mean quite that, r he isn't in the inner circle; ut at least a long term in prison."

I tried to bring my shocked face ack to normal, and felt that I had ucceeded when my father said ith a laugh:

"Georges and Mr. Halloran are ue in here at half after eleven," reminded him.

"So they are, so they are," he uid. "Well, they'll just have to ait a minute or two." Then he nocked on my bedroom door and efore anyone could answer spoke ilitantly.

"Don't come in until I give you ie word. I am busy."

At Halloran's "Okay," my faher's lips twitched.

"Halloran will say 'Okay' when t. Peter asks him if he wants to ome through the pearly gates," e said.

"So will Gus," I commented, nd my father nodded.

"My little ruse to frighten Milr succeeded beyond my wildest opes," he said. "He has had dams jumping through hoops er since, and as I had ordered dams to keep close track of him, couldn't have had a better set-

"Luckily, Milner doesn't susect yet that I know anything bout him, but from my staged one conversation he has deuced that I have a strong suspiion of the identity of the man o now has that document."

My father's face lost its gray for an instant.

"I wish his deduction were corct," he said, "but unfortunately, have no idea of the next link in e chain beyond Milner. Hower, with any kind of luck today, shall be able to find that out, for dams tells me that when Milner not bedeviling Redfield, he is sy making preparations for an rplane flight to Washington, th a return trip scheduled for a w hours later."

Milner To Be Trailed.

I caught my breath at that, for have an unreasoning terror of rplanes for my friends and relaes, although not for myself.

"Will that mean that you will to Washington, also?" I queri.

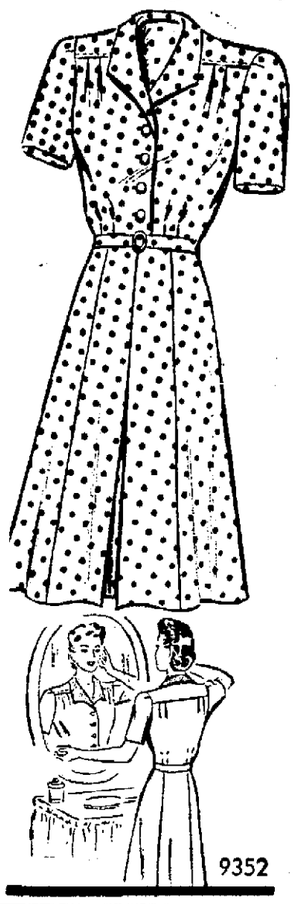

He smiled at me indulgently. "Not this time," he said. "I will ly have to check the identity of e plane and its leaving time, en call our men in Washington long distance. Given a code scription of Milner, they will til him most efficiently."

He paused, and I realized that he was in a mellow mood, so I said:

"You said Milner was bedeviling Redfield, and that he wouldn't bother the party tonight. That is surely good news. I dreaded a possible scene."

BIRD LOSES BEAK IN BERLIN RAID

LONDON —(AP)— Planes of the bomber and coast commands carry pigeons for use in ferrying messages if the planes get into difficulty.

First indication that the birds were being used came when anti-aircraft fire over Berlin recently tore away part of a pigeon's beak. It also was disclosed that on one occasion a pigeon flew 115 miles with an SOS message that saved a plane crew.

"The Authority on Authorities"

MAKE HIM WASTE IT

After your first two leads of the tops in a suit make it clear that both your partner and the declarer are now void of it and can ruff the next round, you do not desire ordinarily to make your partner the victim of an over-ruff. Hence, you usually switch to another suit. But suppose those two leads of yours set up a third-round winner in the dummy. That card is likely to be valuable to the declarer as a means of discarding some loser from his own hand. But you make him waste it if you lead a third round at once, forcing declarer to over-ruff your partner and hence preventing use of the honor for discarding purposes later.

A part score by East and West, which made 3-Hearts a game bid, had an influence on that auction. South reckoned he was probably sacrificing, and West thought so, too. He saw his partner's high-low on the K and A of hearts, but also knew South was cleared of the suit after that, and so switched, selecting the club 8. The A won, a small diamond was led and the contract was safely home, as the heart J later furnished a discard of the spade 10.

If West, noting that his two heart leads had set up the dummy's J, had repeated the suit, East's lowly diamond 3 would have put the blocks to the declarer. He would have been obliged to ruff the trick himself then, and so could not have used the heart J later on to trash the spade 10. The loss of the spade trick would have made a total of four for the defense, just enough to score a set.

CHAPTER XII

Freda thought, "I don't want her to marry Scott just because he's convenient. I've nothing really against him except that he isn't good enough for her. Somehow he's inadequate. But he's the kind who'll bide his time and wait, all according to plan, and catch her in a weak, lonely moment."

Freda said, "I'm sorry. It was a petty thing to bring up. Forget it. But you won't. I know you. You have the memory of an elephant. Tell me some more about Clive." She smiled, a charming, impudent smile. "I'm just a little housewife who never meets a man like Clive and who probably wouldn't know how to cope with him if she did. But I'd like to meet him with you. He may be the answer to a maiden's prayer, conceited and arrogant and all that; but I'll stick to it that he's a man of good taste in women. Don't be fooled, darling. Any man who takes the trouble to come here all the way from New York to see a woman hasn't completely passed out of the picture. He hasn't given you up as a lost cause. I'll make a little bet with you. He challenged you – and you challenged him. It isn't finished. It probably hasn't even begun."

Reclining her head on the back of the white wicker chair, she chuckled again. "Funny, we've been talking about men and love and marriage. That's what all women talk about when they get together. Do men? You bet your life they don't! Ian told me once that he'd like to be invisible and hear a group of women talking. I told him that what he'd get out of it was the knowledge that women are nearly always afraid of losing what they have. Women have so much more to lose than men have. I suppose that's what makes us petty and catty."

Carol said, "Bill lost nothing."

Freda's dark eyes quickened. "I wonder. That's one way of looking at it. True, he didn't lose his job or his friends or his place in the community – as you have. But Bill has lost a driving force. Carol. You . . . You helped him and never let him know how much. I've heard you put words in his mouth when he couldn't think of the right words. I've heard you make statements and a week later I've heard Bill say the same things, as though it was his idea. Do you think that Ian and I had any difficulty in making a choice between you? Ian is for you. He always has been. He knows, as too few people know, that Bill would have remained an obscure clerk if it hadn't been for you. All of which doesn't alter or change anything for you now."

"No . . . To all appearances Bill hasn't lost. He's gained. He has a wife whose mother was presented at the English court. So what? But he has lost a part of his thinking apparatus – you – that he's depended on for seven years. There's no emotion or sentimentality involved in that statement. It's a fact. Bill has lost a part of his mentality. Maybe I'm wrong, but as time goes on that's what he's going to miss most. And as time goes on I'd like to see you fall so much in love with somebody it would make you dizzy!"

"Do you think it will be Clive?" Carol was startled the moment she asked it. Why Clive? Why not Scott?

Freda smiled. "I don't know. But I do know it isn't finished with him. And I'll still make a bet with you."

Carol smiled. "No bets . . . I'm going home."

"No bets and you are not, baby. You're staying for dinner. Ian wants to know why the dickens you won't have a meal with us. He's beginning to think there's something wrong with our food and the cook should be fired. Ian . . . God bless him . . . I love him."

Scott was dressing for Lillian and Browne's party in the small, sparsely furnished bedroom of the small apartment he shared with Hilda, his sister and his senior by some 13 years. Wearing his white dinner jacket, he stood before the mirror of the old-fashioned dresser and meticulously brushed his dark hair. His hands moved slowly though the hour was growing late, but Scott was never known to be on time and his friends had formed the habit of telling him to come half an hour before they really wanted him.

Other than a photograph of a blond girl with a laughing, teasing face, there was nothing in the room, furnished with a single bed, the dresser which served as a desk and a comfortable old chair sadly in need of new covering, to give it any identity. It might have been a cheap hotel room or a room in a boarding house, waiting for its next temporary occupant. It was a drab room without personality and without comfort.

Scott never thought of the room, though occasionally he contemplated the photograph and told himself he'd put it out of sight. It had been four years since he had seen Suzanne. Four years since he had been graduated from a western university and Suzanne, gay but elusive had married someone else and he, Scott, had returned to Clinton with only the photograph to remind him of the only love of his life. He had never told anyone about Suzanne because it embarrassed him to speak of his feelings.

Out of a lonely childhood he had evolved a plan for his life. Reticent but observing, it had never occurred to him that it was selfish but rather practical to cultivate the friendship of people who would do him the most good. As a consequence, people with whom he had grown up and of whom he had been fond were discarded as his insurance business progressed . . . progressed but quite slowly. And as he had learned to deny himself of his old friends, so he had also learned to deny himself of certain comforts and small luxuries within his income, eating Spartan meals which the gentle Hilda managed out of the small allowance he gave her, buying cheap clothes, sleeping on sheets that had been patched, and eating from china that had been chipped.

Those things were not important, but it was immensely important to mingle with people like Freda and Ian and Carol and Bill even though frequently he let others pay the check, thinking that they had more money than he and really shouldn't mind.

Though his business had not progressed as he had hoped, he was pleased with his social success. "I've been darned lucky; I'm sitting pretty," he often said to himself. He had many friends and he was constantly in demand. People liked him not because he ever did anything in particular but rather because he never did anything in particular and could be counted on to be unattached, young, good-looking, college-bred and an excellent dancer.

But Scott's plan was not complete since, after the Suzanne incident, it included a wife who would do him credit and help him. Carol and Bill he had admired profoundly. He had also envied them their material possessions. And though there was scarcely a girl from the better families he had not "dated," he had not found one he particularly wanted to marry either because he couldn't make himself care enough or because he was afraid, if he married a helpless rich girl, her father would do nothing for them and the girl would be a hindrance to him. He wanted to be sure. Then, too, there had been one or two girls who had not responded to his overtures, and Scott, sensitive and cautious, had immediately checked them off his list.

The Sturtevant divorce had shocked and hurt him to a degree he had not felt since Suzanne had married someone else. But when the smoke began to disappear, he had seen the plan of his life broadening, and new and exciting words being written into his future. If he'd marry Carol . . . It was a wonderful idea! She was lovely and popular and he had frequently been excitingly aware of her – when he had danced with her, when he found himself alone with her, when she was sitting beside him in a car.

He hadn't let himself fall in love with her because she was Bill's wife. But now she wasn't anybody's wife. She was free. Hilda was crazy about her. Hilda didn't feel inferior to Carol because Carol's beginning had been humble, too. Scott's other friends were only names to his sister. But Hilda often said, "I saw Carol today down town. We stopped and talked. My, she looked lovely."

There was however, a slight shadow in the perfect plan. It was not Carol's love for Bill. It did not occur to Scott that Carol's love for Bill was anything which he, Scott, could not overcome with minimum difficulty. No, the shadow was money – Carol's money. How much had she? Had Bill made a cash settlement? How much? Could Carol do with it as she pleased? Or was the alimony her only income, any income which would cease if she married again? If only he knew that! He had to know that! But how? He couldn't ask her or Bill or their attorney, and Carol rarely spoke of money.

Still there would have to be a way. He had to find out whether she had any money of her own. Without it, marriage was out of the question. He had Hilda to support for the rest of her life; and his own small income would by no means support Carol in the manner in which she had been accustomed and the manner in which he, Scott, ardently wished to be accustomed.

Now he thought of Bill and Evelyn and the night he had had dinner with them. Evelyn was lovely. Though his conservatism had been outraged by the divorce, he could scarcely blame Bill. Bill had always had the best breaks. A lucky guy . . . and now a wife like Evelyn! But Scott, weighing his friendship with Bill and the possibility of marrying Carol and the substantial cash settlement (he hoped), had had no difficulty in making a choice between them. When Bill, obviously glad to see him, said "Come out again, Scott," Scott had said, "Oh, sure, thanks," knowing that he would not go again.

TELEPHONE 4251-6

IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

WASHINGTON—What about congress going on record as to whether it favors real international collaboration after the war? Why not have a showdown on it in congress now?

Both sides should favor it. Recently Senator Taft made a remark which has echoed with a chill through the Allied capitals to the effect that our friends abroad should bear in mind that the Atlantic Charter and the four freedoms are thus far only the declarations of President Roosevelt—as far as the United States is concerned, and have not been approved by either house of congress. Senator Bennett Clark of Missouri, a leading isolationist, is in favor of congress adopting a concurrent resolution to the effect that congress will at the proper time have to pass on international arrangements that may be made by the executive branch. He says it is only fair that our Allies should know now that the legislative branch cannot ultimately be ignored.

Clapper

The adoption of such a resolution would be going, in more formal and in a more official way, what 39 senators who were opposed to the League of Nations did during the Paris peace conference. They signed a round robin warning that the Paris conference had better first attend to the making of a peace and defer the creation of a League of Nations until later. That was signed by more than one-third of the senate, constituting a genuine, if unofficial, warning to the peace conference that there was trouble ahead. But the warning was ignored because the function of the senate in ratifying treaties was only vaguely understood abroad and it was generally considered that Woodrow Wilson had full power to commit the United States.

This is recognized now as elementary by all foreign governments. In fact they are most keenly conscious of the power of congress and are now busy trying to size up the prospects, and to determine which way congress will be likely to jump.

Meantime governments are staking out their territorial demands and are otherwise preparing themselves to go it alone in case the United States should refuse again to join with other nations in trying to bring order into world affairs.

That uncertainty among other nations is having such a corrosive effect that it is alarming some of our own government people and many outside persons and groups interested in trying to make this next victory stick.

They have an interest, just as do the isolationists although for opposite reasons, in ascertaining over which fork of the road congress wishes to travel.

You can't get into details of post-war arrangements. The war is still to be finished. There isn't a man alive, no matter how high in the government, who could sit down now and draw a blueprint that would be likely to stand up five years hence. The big thing to know now is which way congress intends to go—whether it intends to proceed along the road back to isolation. Will congress refuse to make agreements with other nations for the general security and economic stability of all, or is it ready to try to do something with the hope of reducing the chances of a third world war?

That is a general question. But a man knows which side of that general question he is on. He will get no settlement either way that will be 100 per cent to his liking. But he knows in which direction he wants to see the efforts of his government directed.

That is a good time to get everybody pegged on that general question. Whichever way we are inclined to go, it is only fair that our Allies know it now. We should not leave them under misapprehension.

Senator Gillette's resolution, to approve the basic principles of the Atlantic Charter offers one method of getting at the question. Or some of the isolationists could move along the line suggested by Bennett Clark. Or some of the senators on the foreign relations committee could start it for that matter. Both houses ought to be in on it.

BACKS BILL TO JAIL 'NUMBERS' OPERATORS

Attorney General's Office Drafts Measures To Check Gambling.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — The weight of the attorney general's office was placed today behind legislation designed to stamp out the "numbers" or "policy" gambling racket by imposing prison terms on the promoters.

The proposed new laws strike at "numbers" customers for the first time with a provision for a fine of $50 to $500 for the first offense and a maximum fine of $1,000 and six months' imprisonment for the second.

Atty. Gen. Thomas J. Herbert, appearing last night before the house of representatives judiciary committee, disclosed that his office drafted three of the anti-gambling bills before the legislature.

They were prepared, he said, after an investigation in Mahoning county (Youngstown) showed that the present laws were not stringent enough to eradicate the "numbers" racket.

The most severe penalty which now may be imposed under state law for promoting or furthering a lottery or game of chance is a $500 fine and a 90-day jail sentence.

Under one bill being considered by the house judiciary committee anyone who sold tickets in a lottery or scheme of chance, "by whatever name," would be liable to a $500 fine and six months in jail for the first offense and a maximum fine of $2,500 and one to three years in the penitentiary for the second offense.

A second bill provided a maximum fine of $2,500 and one to three years imprisonment for anyone convicted of promoting or backing a scheme of chance.

Opponents of the bills told the committee the proposed laws were so broad they covered "harmless gambling" such as church bingo games and theater bank nights.

The judiciary committee deferred action on the bills and instructed a sub-committee to redraft them into one measure.

Earlier, the house completed action on a resolution inviting Capt. Edward V. Rickenbacker, aviation ace, to speak before the legislature. The vote was 113 to 5.

NEW PAY-GO TAX PROPOSAL WINS HOUSE BACKING

Plan Would Adopt Withholding Feature To Apply on 1942 Taxable Income.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—A threatened house revolt over pay-as-you-go income tax legislation gathered strength today as the ways and means commitee meets to vote on a plan which would sidetrack all forgiveness suggestions.

The committee's latest proposal would merely apply a 20 per cent paycheck withholding tax against 1942 levies beginning July 1. All but the new income taxpayers would continue paying taxes a year late. For an estimated 17,000,000 new taxpayers, according to Rep. Bertrand W. Gearhart, R., Calif., it would mean compulsory savings against their taxes for 1943.

"This group ordinarily wouldn't start paying their income taxes, and wouldn't be required to, until March 15, 1944," Gearhart said. "Under the plan now before the committee, these taxpayers would have 20 per cent of the paychecks deducted beginning July 1 and the amount would be deducted from their returns next year."

For persons who have paid income taxes in the past, the plan would provide the option of becoming current in 1943 by paying all their obligations for 1942 on March 15 and then begin withholding, he added.

This would amount to double taxation, Gearhart explained, but pointed out that any taxpayer who chose otherwise could continue to pay his taxes one year behind through the withholding tax.

"According to treasury estimates," he said, "about 30 per cent of the income taxpayers paid up in full on March 15 last year. Therefore, we can almost assume that 30 per cent of the old taxpayers will become current in 1943.

"Add to this the 17,000,000 new taxpayers who will be forced to become current and the bulk of the taxpayers will be on a pay-as-you-go basis by the middle of 1944."

The withholding plan apparently has the support of the 15 Democratic member of the committee and Gearhart. The other Republicans stood by the Ruml plan for skipping 1942 income levies. They claimed impressive support in the house and promised to make their plan an issue on the house floor.

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

DETROIT—Last week, after a thorough search of the police and court records, these dispatches disclosed that a man with a record as a whiteslaver, bootlegger and brawler had been feted by officials of the national war labor board and of the Textile Workers' union of the CIO in Worcester, Mass., on his elevation to the office of president of the central Massachusetts joint board of that union, embracing 23 locals.

Pegler

The next day there was a follow-story reporting the personal disinclination of a press agent for the New England regional war labor board, a public employee, himself president of a CIO local in Worcester, namely the Newspaper Guild, to publish the facts of the case on the ground that this would be more harmful to the workers than the continuing activity of a man who, it now appears, had managed to conceal his record from his fellow townsmen in the rank and file.

Twenty-four hours later, however, the Massachusetts state director of the union announced that the new president of the joint board had resigned, presumably by request, effective at once. The director added, without disputing the facts as published, that nevertheless they had been exaggerated and colored and insisted that the retiring official was not, as stated, an habitual loafer but on the contrary, a mill worker, employed steadily since 1939.

This prompt action of a group of CIO unions to remove an underworld character from a position of authority and power is the first of its kind and presents a contrast to the conduct of the American Federation of Labor in many similar and worse cases.

The higher councils of the textile workers, a trade in need of clean, responsible organization, apparently disagreed with the president of the Worcester Newspaper Guild and they will be respected for their decision whereas William Green, the president of the AFL and others of the arrogant hierarchy of the older group have aroused opposition in and out of the unions and brought the AFL into disrepute as a front for racketeers. The Textile Workers union will gain, not lose, by this prompt, honest admission of error for they have closed the incident with honor.

Green made a very bad decision about four years ago when he took the attitude that attacks on the crooks who infest his organization were attacks on labor. He tolerated a program of counter-attack through a number of dirty little union publications which are, in themselves, rackets used to intimidate merchants and other employers and to promote the crooked enterprises of union racketeers. Had Green admitted, for example, that, through carelessness over the years and in the confusion of the scuffle with John L. Lewis and the CIO, gangsters and other traitors to labor had acquired power in AFL unions and had he sincerely tried to throw them out, he would have spared his organization the scandal, which has disgraced the AFL itself.

Far from that, however, he even upheld one gang of rascals in St. Louis at the expense of a rank-and-file group who finally risked their livelihood to appeal to the public courts and won. The AFL was shown to be a labor Tammany or a labor New Deal party in which men who enjoyed personal respectability to the extent that they had never been convicted of crime were thoroughly at home with such evil rogues as Browne and Bioff, Scalise, Dempsey of the iron workers, a renegade cop who owed an unpaid fine for bootlegging but had risen to the position of national treasurer, Umbrella Mike Boyle and thieves, extortioners and gunmen without number.

In not a single case did any AFL union or the executive council in Washington raise a hand to help a public prosecutor to indict and convict any parasite on labor and every person who undertook to drive out such and put them in jail was vilified in the orations and the press of the very racketeers who used, and still use, AFL charters as permits to rob workers, employees and the public and exploit the members to support racing stables and acquire yachts and villas in Florida.

JOINS MOVE TO INVITE 'RICK'

Catlett Votes With 114 To Ask Rickenbacker to Talk To Ohio Assembly.

Rep. John L. Catlett, Richland county member of the Ohio legislature, joined the GOP majority in the legislature yesterday in requesting that Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker be given a chance to address the Ohio General assembly on the war effort.

Following a heated discussion during which Cleveland representatives charged that the noted flier was a "labor baiter," the house voted, 114 to 5 to invite Capt. Rickenbacker to speak in Columbus. The state senate approved the invitation on Feb. 25 by a 21 to 0 vote.

After Rep. Lody Huml, Cuyahoga county Democrat, charged that Capt. Rickenbacker's recent New York address was "so biased, so full of hatred for labor, that even the Republicans failed to applaud him," Catlett and five other Republicans rose to their feet to demand that Huml retract his statements.

Catlett, serving his second term in the legislature, said that thousands of war workers had enrolled in the Rickenbacker "Hat In the Ring" clubs proving that the flying ace was still popular and on the war "firing line."

The Mansfielder added that "We ought not to condemn him (Capt. Rickenbacker) for what he might say, at least until he says it."

Rep. Huml called the flier a "labor baiter" and Rep. Michael P. O'Brien, Cuyahoga county Democrat, added Capt. Rickenbacker, "has descended to the level of another Lindbergh, who also delivered speeches which he didn't write."

Huml then proposed an amendment to the invitation which would provide that A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, also appear before the legislature to present labor's story. The amendment was killed unanimously by voice vote on motion of Rep. Myers, Allen county Republican, to table the proposal.

Mansfield Red Cross war fund workers get a good picture of the "person behind the donation" as they visit every section of the city in their door knocking campaign. Some of those contributing are found to be crippled, ill or in distress. One brought forth an aged German refugee who had come to Mansfield two years ago from France via Portugal. She told the worker, rather than the representative telling her, of the assistance the Red Cross had given her family, which consists of a husband and son in German concentration camps.

Mansfield and Richland countians can take justifiable pride in their recent purchase of two bombers, "City of Mansfield" and "Spirit of Richland County," through war bond purchases. The current issue of "Minute Men," U. S. treasury publication, listed Ohio's purchases, with Mansfield the only city listed for two! Other Buckeye listings included: Dover, Massillon high school, Greater Cleveland Slovaks, and Plumbrook Trojan Powder company.

Junior Red Cross members today issued an appeal for tin cans . . . One that's not connected with the salvage drive. Red Crossers at Brinkerhoff and Hedges schools have an order to get 25 one-pound tin cans with tight-fitting lids. They're to decorate them so they can be sent to nurses serving in the armed forces for use in packing face creams so they can be carried into zones where the nurses are on duty. Contributions will be received at the Red Cross office or at either Brinkerhoff or Hedges school.

CANNED GOODS SURPLUS LISTED

OPA Ration Chief Reports 80 Million Cans Declared By 'Honest Hoarders.'

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Paul M. O'Leary, the office of price administration's rationing chief, said today incomplete figures indicated that between 80,000,000 and 100,000,000 cans of excess foodstuffs were declared during the recent rationing registration.

That number of cans would take care of the canned food needs of the whole country for one month.

O'Leary confessed in an interview that OPA was impotent to deal with the "honest" hoarders who declared stocks far in excess of normal needs.

"The only way we can catch up with the type of hoarder is for congress to pass legislation which would allow us to confiscate food stocks we consider in excess of needs," he said.

O'Leary revealed that two additional ration books—Nos. 3 and 4 will be issued early next fall. They are expected to take care of all rationing programs through 1944.

Plans to issue an all purpose ration book have been abandoned because it would take tons of wire to staple a thicker book. Book No. 3 will be the same as Book No. 2, but with different colored coupons. Book No. 4 may be different.

FORUM TONIGHT

Public Session at Simpson On Food Production.

Problems of food production in the face of labor and machinery shortages will be considered at a public forum session at 8 p. m. today in the John Simpson junior high school auditorium.

Arranged by the Richland County Africultural War board and the county Triple-A committee, the session will be open to farmers and city residents who will have an opportunity to suggest solutions for the production problem.

E. E. Durree of Hicksville, district AAA field man, is scheduled to conduct the discussion.

GIVES APPROVAL

ICC OK's Abandonment of Walhonding Line.

The Interstate Commerce commission in Washington today had authorized abandonment of the Walhounding branch of the Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Detroit railroad.

The branch line, once a busy carrier of freight and passengers, connects the main line of the Pennsylvania railroad at Loudonville with Brinkhaven, 17 miles to the south.

Business men in villages along the branch line protested the abandonment of the railroad on the grounds that it would isolate them.

Fable From the Fifties: A trio of French sailors from the Fantasque wandered into Saks-Fifth avenue the other day to do some minor purchasing, and when the various floor managers had done some heavy translating, it developed the boys wanted some new pom-pons for their hats. Well, pom-pons for the berets of French sailors aren't articles regularly carried by Fifth avenue department stores and, rather regretfully, the floor managers explained this.

The sailors were puzzled, somewhat indignant. In Paris they could walk into the Galerie LaFayette or La Bonne Marchette and get a pom-pon any day. What was the matter with the great New York department store!

Well, finally the floor manager consulted the millinery department, just on an off-chance, and that was how Sophie, Gimbel's little dressmaker, who is French heard about the sailors.

She not only whipped up three pom-pons for the boys, but told them to send in all their friends. Now she and her staff are all working nights at home, making red pom-pons free for the entire French fleet in New York.

NEWSPAPERARCHIVE®

Firing will be resumed this week-end in this big winter of bowling on the West Third street lanes when the Inter-City tournament gets under way Saturday at Colony alleys.

The peace and quiet that descended on the jousting pits last week-end after four weeks of state Moose kegling merely gave the pin boys a chance to get their second wind. And they needed it, for the new load of oxygen they took on will have to last them seven long weeks of Inter-City wood spotting.

And in all other respects the Moose tourney was a breeze compared to the schedule set up for the Inter-City. There'll be no calling it a day at 6 p. m. on Sunday in this joust. Midnight shifts will be in order for both Saturday and Sunday kegling.

Two shifts of 5-man event are booked on opening night Saturday at 8 and 10 o'clock, while the first Sunday schedule lasts from 9 a. m. until midnight, the last shift of singles starting at 10:30 p. m.

Taking star billing the first week-end will be the Fostoria Red Flares, members of the pre-war N. C. O. travelling league, who are well known to Mansfield fans through their league trips here.

The Flares, you'll remember, had the backer who sat in the stands offering cash bonuses for strikes, tough spares, turkeys, and just for the heck of it.

Defending champions for this year's tournament, and their winning marks last winter at Lorain are: all-events, Hank Andorka, Lorain, 2061; high game, G. Lockstead, Marion, 285; team event, Elyria Bowling Center, 3120; doubles, Al Pompein and Hank Andorka, Lorain, 1399; singles, L. Lockstead, Marion, 727.

Hank Andorka, Lorain alley operator, won't be back to defend his all-events and doubles championships. He's in the army now.

How have Mansfield keglers fared in the championship lists of past tournaments?

In 1930 F. Rike took the all-events here in Mansfield with 1850, and in 1931 Leland Stock copped the all-events at Sandusky with 1956.

Beeney took high game at Lorain in 1916 with 269, and Dale Cleckner copped it here in Mansfield in 1935 with 290.

Rownd & Haag took the team event in Mansfield in 1918 with 2742, National Ice won in Mansfield in 1935 with 3107, and Milan Spring Beers won at Sandusky in 1936 with 3038.

In doubles, McBride-Wenthrich won at Tiffin in 1919 with 1181, Fessler-Webber at Mansfield in 1923 with 1201, Smith-Young at Fremont in 1927 with 1247; and Bookman-Grable at Sandusky in 1936 with 1306.

And in singles, Beeney won at Lorain in 1916 with 615; Sattler at Elyria in 1922 with 682, and Dale Cleckner at Mansfield in 1935 with 720.

Iowa Seahawks Get On Irish Schedule

SOUTH BEND, Ind. —INS— The Iowa Seahawks today replaced Southern California on the Notre Dame 1943 football schedule.

The game will be played in the Notre Dame Stadium, Nov. 20, the date originally set for the Trojan-Irish intersectional battle.

Notre Dame requested cancellation of the Trojan game because of war-time transportation difficulties. Last Sunday Stanford agreed to call off its game with the Irish, Sept. 25 for the same reason.

Georgia Tech officials, however, announced they expected to bring their team to South Bend, Oct. 2, although cancellation had been requested as a wartime measure.

Athletic Supplies Meet Mt. Vernon

Baptists Take Loop Tourney

Upset St. John Quint In Church League Tilt.

BAPTIST "rags to riches" basketball team upset St. John's cagers, 32 to 25, last night to win the Senior Church league basketball tournament on the Y. M. C. A. hardwood.

Breaking an 11-all halftime tie, the surprising Baptist, who dropped seven games in first round play, rolled in 15 points in the third quarter while holding the Saints to a pair of free throws to build up a commanding 26-13 advantage. Both teams were missing badly in the first half. The Saints took a 7-2 lead in the first frame, but cooled off in the next period, getting only four tallies.

Then came that big Baptist rally with Phillips, Weber and Abele setting the pace. St. John's was shooting in tough luck in this period, missing several "in and out" buckets. Jim Robertson saved his team from a whitewashing, getting the two foul shots.

With the score standing double against them, the Saints came back with 12 markers in the final quarter but it wasn't enough to erase the damage done in the third period.

Baptist's victory set the stage for the season championship playoff next week.

Tom Farrell turned the whistle blowing chores over to Y Physical Director Johnny Fike in the consolation game, and proceeded to roll in 22 points to lead First Lutheran to a 51-28 triumph over St. Luke's.

The winners went ahead 12-3 in the first frame, led 23-10 at halftime, and 37-20 at the close of the third period.

Earl Garnes had nine points to lead St. Luke's.

Six Yank Hurlers Sign Contracts

NEW YORK —INS— Following closely the announcement by the New York Yankees that they had signed five pitchers for 1943, the Brooklyn Dodgers announced today that the signed contracts of hurlers Curt Davis and Lester Weber have been received.

The signed Yankee pitchers are Charles Wensloss, James Turner, William Zuber, Henry Browy and Thomas Byrne. The New York club also revealed that Infielder Frank Crosetti will not report to the Yankees until April 10, because of the death of his father in an automobile accident.

Brooklyn's Curt Davis is one of a staff of veterans that last year bore the brunt of the Dodgers' campaign. He won 15 and lost 6 in 1942.

Weber, although with the Dodgers for the entire length of last season, pitched few games, winning 3 and losing 2.

Sport Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK —(AP)— With a Brooklyn outfield squad composed of 41-year old Johnny Cooney; Paul Waner, who'll be 40 before the season starts, Lloyd Waner, 39, Dixie Walker, 32, and Joe Medwick, 31, Boss Branch Rickey might be accused of trying to work an old Dodger on the fans. . . . It's a little different with the Indians, who farmed Ted Szczepkowski out to Baltimore so he could finish his high school course before being inducted into the army. . . . Johnny Cooney's son busted a hand recently knocking a fellow out. He'll never be a Dodger if he's that brittle. . . . What price victory? It cost the N. Y. U. track team two bucks to fill the I. C. 4-A trophy with beer so they could toast last Saturday's triumph.

IT BURNED HIM UP.

When George Von Elm, former national amateur golf champion, shot a wild one into a trap at Los Angeles' Lakeside course recently, he found his ball had rolled into a paper bag. . . . George isn't used to being in traps, or bags either, but the situation didn't stump him. . . . He merely lighted a match, burned the bag and then played his shot. . . . Wonder if the match could be counted as his 15th club?

POSTMAN'S PARAGRAPH

A bit too late, Jack Miller of the Independence, Kas., army basic flying school, points out that those Iowa pre-flight cadets who accomplished 1,000 sit-ups each didn't set any record. . . . The mark, he says, is 1,600 and was made years ago by Dr. James E. Barnes of Youngstown, O., president of the Ohio Association of Boxing commissions. . . . Navy Cadet Sam Sturgis now has raised it to 2,003, so the doc no longer holds the record, but he's still able to sit up and take notice of things.

TODAY'S GUEST STAR

Paul Menton, Baltimore Evening Sun: "The state senate committee of Arkansas didn't pass a law making the university of Arkansas hire a $12,500 football coach; it simply recommended it. And there's more to the recommendation. The new coach's job is to produce a skilled, colorful and victorious team. That's a tough enough job in the Southwest conference in peacetime without tackling it now."

Mulvaine Sets Bucket Record

Marion Star Connects For 38-Point Total.

COLUMBUS —(U.P.)— All was quiet on the western and eastern fronts of Ohio's scholastic cage tourneys last night, but heavy scoring continued in the central and northeastern sectors. Most teams in both classes took a hard-earned rest before returning to the firing lines in the district meets to be held the latter part of this week.

Here is what happened last night:

Central District—A new individual one-game scoring record for this district was set in one game and broken in the following game. Fred Schaus of Newark scored 29 points to better the mark set by a former teammate, Dee Snelling, last year. Less than an hour later Dick Mulvaine, Marion Harding's 6-foot 3-inch forward, climaxed his final season with a 38-point total.

Newark buried Westerville under a 76 to 33 avalanche and appeared to be the strongest contender for the Central District crown. Marion Harding also is expected to reach the final round. The president's used superior height to a crushing advantage in rolling over Grandview 70 to 20.

Northeastern District—No Class B games were scheduled. An all-Akron semi-finals appeared forthcoming in the Kent sectional of the Northeastern district. All four upper-bracket survivors are from the Rubber City and only one outsider, Lorain, remained in the lower pairings.

The tall Lorain quintet snapped North Canton's 20-game winning streak last week and then scored a 48 to 43 triumph over Massilon last night.

All Class B teams in this area remained idle.

Northwestern District — Only two games were played here. Toledo Central Catholic won a semi-finals berth with a 49 to 41 victory over Macomber in the Toledo Class A sectional, while Rossford nosed out Sylvania 33 to 31.

AL SMITH SIGNS

CLEVELAND —(AP)— Only six Cleveland Indians remained on the unsigned list today after Al Smith, veteran southpaw pitcher, agreed to terms. The others are Pitcher Chubby Dean and Allie Reynolds, Catcher Otto Denning, Infielders Ray Mack and Eddie Turchin and Outfielder Jeff Heath.

Be Quick To Treat Bronchitis

Chronic bronchitis may develop if your cough, chest cold, or acute bronchitis is not treated and you cannot afford to take a chance with any medicine less potent than Creomulsion which goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes.

Creomulsion blends beechwood creosote by special process with other time tested medicines for coughs. It contains no narcotics.

MAY DROP PLANS FOR AUTO CAMP AT SHELBY SITE

Officials Decide Project Will Be Useless If It's Not Built Soon.

SHELBY Unless priorities for materials to build the Municipal Trailer camp can be speeded up, city officials will probably drop plans for the erection of an utility building on the site, it was learned today.

The camp would house trailers for the workers at the supply depot, north of the city. Unless the camp is soon completed, city officials pointed out that the trailers would all be located on private ground throughout this area.

As the depot project is expected to be completed in a six-month period, it would be a loss to the city to construct the camp at $1,700 if there were no trailers to use it.

The revised plans were drawn up recently by Boyd Wierman of Mansfield, city engineer.

Keeper of the Flame.

M. G. M.'s "Keeper of the Flame," starring Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn, continues today at the Ohio. Tracy as a newspaper man tries to solve the mysterious death of Miss Hepburn's husband. He discovers that the famous American was actually a Fascist sympathizer. He realizes this would be the greatest story of his career, but he tries to keep the news from the public because of his feelings for Miss Hepburn. Richard Whorf, Margaret Wycherly, Audrey Christie, Horace McNally, Donald Meek, Frank Craven, and Darryl Hickman are included in the cast.

Comedy Film.

There's a new kind of comedy treat in store for movie goers in 20th Century Fox's "Margin For Error," a picturization of the Broadway laugh hit by Clara Booth Luce. The picture, featuring Joan Bennett, Milton Berle and Otto Preminger, opens at the Madison today. Gunfire flashes to the roar of hoofs as Charles Starrett comes to the screen in the cofeature, "Pardon My Gun."

Continues At Park.

Pat O'Brien and George Murphy are featured in the Park's top feature "The Navy Comes Through." The film presents a striking picture of the American Merchant Marines. "Scattergood Survives a Murder," with Guy Kibbee, is the second attraction.

Dark Command.

"Dark Command" opening today at the Ritz, is a vivid picturization of troubled days in the past, when the character and strength of American manhood and womanhood surmounted the greatest obstacles. The picture is an adaptation of the famous book of the same name by W. R. Burnett. John Wayne, Claire Trevor, Walter Pidgeon, and Roy Rogers play the leading roles. The chilling "Undying Monster" story of the wierd werewolf, is the second hit.

Sees Desire for Power Motivating Economic Factor

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Bowing out of a busy job as anti-trust prosecutor, Thurman Arnold believes that power—not profit—is the main motivating force behind today's economic battles.

Confirmed yesterday by the senate as a judge of the District of Columbia court of appeals, the retiring assistant attorney general in charge of the anti-trust division told officials attending a testimonial dinner last night that "cartel leaders are gathering from all parts of the world to protect their system of high prices and low turnover" against the "new enterprise that is coming after the war."

He declared the world was on the verge of a new industrial age which might bring a higher standard of living than ever before known, due largely to the development of light metals and chemicals. Stating that fear "of the tremendous productive energy of the new world" had incited a battle on the home front, he said:

"The great struggle between economic forces which is going on behind our armies in the field is not a struggle for profits—it is a struggle for domination of industry after the war."

AUTO STICKER SALES LAGGING

They're Nearly 1,000 Behind Those Of Year Ago.

Sale of 1943 automobile stickers for the first seven days are nearly 1,000 behind sales for the same period in 1942, Deputy Registrar Jack Berger of the Richland County Auto club said today.

To date, Berger said the Mansfield office has issued 1,400 stickers compared to 2,236 a year ago. Berger said he believed the decline largely due to the fact that motorists are faced with income tax payments this week. He said he expected sales to increase after the March 15 tax deadline.

BOOST APPROVED

War Labor Board Grants 5½-Cent Increase At Plant.

WASHINGTON —(UP)— The War Labor Board today unanimously approved a general wage increase of 5½ cents an hour, retroactive to June 21, 1942, for approximately 1,100 employes at the Masury and Petroleum, O., plants of the General American Transportation corporation. The employes are represented by the United Steel Workers of America (CIO).

QUITS PRO FOOTBALL

CLEVELAND —(UP)— Gaylon Smith, Cleveland Rams fullback, who was 10th leading ball carrier in the National Professional Football league last season, announced today his retirement "whether there is pro ball next year or not." Smith is employed at Thompson Aircraft Products company.

GET TOUGH

OPA Forces Holders of B and C Cards to Share Rides.

CLEVELAND —(AP)— The regional office of price administration said today it was going to "get tough" with war workers who hold B and C gasoline ration cards but fail to carry out share-the-ride agreements.

An OPA representative from Washington will confer with regional officials tomorrow concerning a plan for enforcing the ride-sharing program, the local office disclosed through a spokesman who declined to be named.

"There's a distinct possibility that ration boards will be instructed to lift B and C cards of war workers not co-operating with the program when the time comes for renewals," said the spokesman for the regional OPA, which includes Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Kentucky and West Virginia.

FAVORS FINES

Secretary Perkins Suggests Absentee Penalties.

WASHINGTON —(INS)— Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins today proposed to congress that absentee workers in war plants be fined when they deliberately stay away from their jobs.

This was the first time that a cabinet member had ever suggested such a step to combat absenteeism.

Miss Perkins did not elaborate on her statement or outline a system of fines. However, she said that it should be worked out with unions and labor in war factories.

The cabinet official also warned that pending legislation to correct absenteeism was "almost certain" to delay a "practical solution by industry and labor."

OK'S RETENTION

Senate Committee Approves Continuing Lend-Lease.

WASHINGTON —(INS)— As the house neared a vote on extension of the lend-lease act for another year the senate foreign relations committee today unanimously approved continuation of aid to America's allies.

The senate committee's report, however, declared that congress must approve future economic agreements with other nations.

The revision was agreed upon after Republican members asserted that the original report sought to commit the United States to a future policy of reduction of tariffs and commercial agreements which might be rejected by the people.

FIRST LADY HAS FARM SOLUTION

Suggests Formation of Women's Land Army Like Britain's.

NEW YORK —(UP)— Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt suggested last night that the United States might raise a women's land army, like Britain, if other efforts to solve the farm labor shortage fail.

She said in a press conference that recruits would have to accept farm work as a year-round proposition and that the government would have to provide them with adequate training, protection against unemployment and health insurance, since they would be eligible for social security.

Later, Mrs. Roosevelt addressed the Girl Scouts of America, of which she is honorary president.

BLACK-OUT NEXT FOR RICHLAND

State Announces County To Be Included in Area Alert Late in March.

patrolled the entire business, factory and residential area and few incident reports of violations were made to Captain Schwab. In some commercial structures, night lights had been left burning over safes or vaults. In home a few basement lights were noted while motor traffic moved with dim lights during the 20-minute test.

OCD officials paid tribute today to North Main street merchants, and the warden organization headed by Ray Ward. Advertising display signs burned brilliantly and windows were brightly illuminated during the early evening. On the first note of the warning siren the entire west side of the principal commercial thoroughfare was blacked out.

The same applause went to merchants and office building occupants or custodians on Park avenue west and adjoining business streets. Captain Schwab indicated today that the proprietor of one restaurant will be asked to explain why a group of youths were permitted to puff glowing cigarets while crowded against the window of his eating place during the dim-out.

The Ohio, Madison and Ritz theaters were in darkness and other places of public assembly were denuded of light during the test.

State defense officials have or will inspect Mansfield's defense corps to determine if the city is prepared to participate in the 20-county black-out to come yet in March. War plants will be separately tested to determine their ability to black out their buildings and, on request, will be excused from participating in this test, which will include Richland, Ashland, Crawford and Holmes county.

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

Red Raspberries Real Treat In Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Association.

Of the bramble fruits recommended for Victory gardens, red raspberries are, perhaps, the most popular. Not much fruit can be expected the first season after planting, but the berries provide a real treat the following year.

Raspberries can be planted in the spring as soon as the soil can be worked. As illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, should the bushes arrive from the nursery before you are ready for them, "heel in" until you can plant them in their permanent location. "Heeling in" means digging a shallow trench in the shady spot, setting the bushes in at an angle, then covering the roots well with soil. The soil covering should be kept moist. To protect the roots against drying out while "heeled in" good protection is afforded by covering them with wet burlap.

There are many methods of planting red raspberries, but the solid-row system, as illustrated, is perhaps the best and simplest for the average Victory garden. When this method is used, set the plants 2 to 3 feet apart in the row, and the rows 5 to 6 feet apart. The suckers are then allowed to grow in the rows, but are cultivated out between rows, thus affording passageways for cultivating and caring for the bushes as they grow and develop.

Plant raspberries very firmly, stamping the soil about the plant with your feet as illustrated. After planting cut the canes back to about 6 inches in height.

LEARNS ABOUT TAXI PATRONS

Newspaper Reporter Finds Women Are Poor 'Tippers' and People Friendly.

CLEVELAND — (U.P.) — Take it from Marion Hopwood, reporter for a Cleveland newspaper, a woman cab driver leads quite a life.

Miss Hopwood drove a taxicab for one day on an assignment from her city desk to "find out what it's like."

Her first fare was a salesman, who got into the cab, took one startled look at the driver, and climbed right out again.

The rest of the day wasn't so bad, however. She reported her greatest difficulty was remembering to pull down the flag to start the meter — an important task in a financial sense.

At the end of the day's work, she had taken in $9.90 in fares and $1.80 in tips. Her pay for the first day would have been about $7 in all, including tips — more than the average worker earns.

The reporter declared all her passengers made some comment on the "woman at the wheel," some helpful and encouraging and some not.

She made the following generalities after eight hours of cab-driving:

Women are poor tippers: usually they don't tip at all.

Men don't like a woman driver handling their baggage.

People in general are friendly and co-operative.

Cab drivers are nice people.

HE DOES TRICKS WITH ORCHARD

CARROLLTON, O.—(INS)—If life is just a bowl of cherries for Elmer E. Slates, he probably had even eliminated the pits.

Nicknamed the "Burbank of Carrollton," Slates practices grafting of fruit trees as an avocation.

He gets plums from peach trees; pears from apple trees, and 16 varieties of fruit from another apple tree. He grafted lemons on orange trees, navel oranges on sour oranges, and persimmons on other trees to develop seedless fruit.

He also gets unique blossoms by crossing flowers with shrubs.

Aden, Arabia, is built in the crater of a volcano.

of losing Voroshilovgrad, about 85 miles north of Rostov.

While Hitler drove into the eart of the Orel-Rostov front, ne Red armies pushed their new ffensive on the central front long the old Napoleonic road om Moscow to Smolensk and exrted heavy pressure around the ey German base at Staraya Russa the Lake Ilmen region.

From an Allied viewpoint, a paramount question was how white Hitler had bled his western defenses—in France, the Low Countries and Norway—to provide the punch for this new offensive on the eastern front.

Military observers doubted that fitler would risk too great a drain n his manpower in the west.

dare" to junk the present voluntary work system in favor of a compulsory draft of civilians.

Stimson's reply to opponents of army growth that industry and agriculture first be stepped up to top efficiency also provoked a sharp divergence of congressional opinion.

Says Army Needs Men To Take Offensive

WASHINGTON — (U P) — Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, vigorously defending plans to build an army of 8,200,000 officers and men by the end of 1943, said last night they were drafted on the theory that "we shall at once take the offensive."

Speaking over a nationwide radio network, Stimson said the 8,200,000 figure was decided upon by the general staff, the joint chiefs of staff and the president after weighing all pertinent problems including availability of manpower, production capacities and transport.

"As between them and their critics," he noted, "I think it is the safer bet to trust the former."

Disruption at this time of the army's carefully-mapped training program, he warned, would "deal a heavier blow to our hopes of a complete final victory than . . . any loss which we are likely to sustain on the battlefield."

He also reiterated his approval of national service legislation such as the Austin-Wadsworth bill. Voluntary co-operation in an all-out war effort "would work with a large part of our population as soon as they clearly understood the need for it," he said.

"But," he added, "the effects of the recalcitrant or thoughtless few is so great upon the minds and efforts of others that I am convinced that the only way to accomplish the result which we must all reach is through a general service act."

The projected army of 8,200,000 he said, does not appear large against Germany's 14,000,000 men under arms, plus Japan's 3,000,000.

"The army is being raised on the fundamental and correct theory that we shall at once take the offensive and seize a number of priceless opportunities which are already opening up for us to end the war as quickly as possible," Stimson said.

He asserted that civilian lassitude, unwillingness to exert an all-out war effort and proposed limitation of the armed forces constitute a "subtle danger, which, unless guarded against, may destroy our present bright hopes of a decisive victory."

Suggestions that the country's economy could not support an army of the projected size fail to take into consideration the elasticity and efficiency of civilian industry, he said.

"It is the duty of every citizen to examine into his own life and his own community and see whether production in industry and on the farm cannot be increased enormously in efficiency; whether absenteeism, threatened strikes, general complacency, and insistence on 'business as usual' are not going a long way to prevent what could be accomplished by an all-out war effort.

"I hope and pray it will not require tragic disaster to bring our people to a realization of the facts.

"The armed forces have placed their house in order. I now ask whether industry and agriculture should not likewise be put on a more efficient war time basis."

British Smash Jap Base In Burma

NEW DELHI — (UP) — Royal Air Force pilots, flying American-built Liberators, last night blasted Prome, vital Japanese-held port on the Irrawaddy river approximately 160 miles north of Rangoon, "with good results," a headquarters communique said today.

Flames lit the sky as the planes left.

Japs To Reduce Hongkong Population

CHUNGKING — (INS) — Japan plans to reduce the population of the captured British crown colony of Hongkong from its present 900,000 to 700,000 because of a serious food shortage, authoritative circles revealed today.

Plans have been completed for the evacuation of 30,000 residents monthly. They will be sent to Shanghai, Hainan island, Taiping and Kongmoon, according to a decision said to have been reached by the Jap puppet regime of Kwangtung province.

The Japanese authorities were reported to have raised prices on all commodities in order to make living in Hongkong more difficult and thus speed the evacuation. Mass arrests have been made and beatings administered to "less desirable" residents, reports said.

army alone is bearing the whole weight of the war"—just 10 weeks after the Anglo-American invasion of North Africa.

On two other recent occasions, Stalin created worry in high places by announcements that Russia was fighting only to clear her soil of the German invaders. This purpose was not exactly in keeping with the war aims of the other United Nations.

Under these circumstances, it would surprise no one in Washington if Mr. Roosevelt were trying to get a clear-cut and definite agreement with Stalin concerning postwar plans.

It is considered significant that Admiral Standley's statement that the Russian people were not informed of United Nation aid had an immediate effect in Moscow. Last night, the Moscow radio broadcast in full the recent report of Lend-Lease Administrator Edward R. Stettinius on the amount of lend-lease aid already dispatched to Russia.

The incident meanwhile will have no effect whatever on house action, extending the lend-lease administration for another year. During the day, the house will vote overwhelmingly for more lend-lease, including billions of dollars for Russia.

But the situation may be difficult in the senate, where there is growing demand for more light on what Russia intends to do in the immediate future and in the post-war world.

"Canny" means shrewd and cautious—so it's canny to can when you can.

Solving Farm Problems at Home

JUST as it is difficult for the human mind to grasp the immensity of a global war, it is far from simple to realize the scope of required agricultural production when the entire United States is considered as a unit.

The problem is much simplified, however, when the country as a whole is broken down into its component parts —states, counties and communities—and each considered as a distinct productive unit.

It can thus be seen that Richland county farmers have adopted a sensible attitude in deciding that their chief responsibility is to find ways and means to increase production on their own farms and in their own county, "without waiting for outside help."

After all, it is upon individual effort, coupled with intelligent co-operation, that success or failure of the entire farm program depends, and it is as each farm is made to produce more than it produced last year that production throughout the United States will be sufficiently increased to meet the needs of war.

There are problems of availability of labor, machinery and various farm supplies, in which government agencies and group action can be helpful, and everything possible should be done along co-operative lines, but, as County Farm Agent George B. Ganyard said at a meeting this week, "The solution is going to rest with the local communities and farmers might as well consider it from that viewpoint."

With farm production materially increased and with city and village Victory gardens augmenting the supply of essential foods, Richland county is in position to do its unit share in reaching Ohio's food production goal, thus contributing to the vast national requirements.

First Dimout Tests Succeed

REPORTS on dimout tests made Monday and Tuesday nights in sections west of Main street reveal admirable unanimity of response on the part of Mansfielders to this important phase of preparedness for civilian defense.

Official and unofficial observers in both of the dimout districts noted practically 100 per cent residential observance of instructions to turn off lights during the specified period starting at 9 o'clock, and the few instances of illumination detected are more reasonably attributed to absence from home or forgetfulness than to deliberate ignoring of instructions.

Tonight's dimout test will affect the southeast section of the city and tomorrow night the northeast area will be darkened, each to make the start at 9 o'clock. Don't forget!

Soldier Advises 'Read Ernie Pyle'

THERE'S so much to read nowadays that a person sometimes misses the very things he would greatly enjoy reading each day—if he once formed the habit.

There, for instance, is the News-Journal's recently introduced feature, Ernie Pyle, Roving Reporter, which many readers have already made a "must" in their evening reading, but which a few may be giving only casual attention.

Writing from North Africa, Capt. Winfield Grant Scott, former Mansfielder, tells his brother Tom to "follow Ernie Pyle's writings and you'll have a good idea of where I am and what I am going through", and whether Ernie is roaming about in Africa, or some other part of the world, or merely gadding around here in America, you'll be interested in the things he sees, the people he meets and the experiences he has from day to day.

Today's article, elsewhere on this page, will give you an excellent idea of how close-up to fighting on the Tunisian front Ernie has been for the past several weeks—and he also tells about a decision that he made. Would your decision, under the same circumstances, have been the same?

Resist That Hoarding Urge

HERE is an incident reported from a paint store. A customer came in and wanted to buy a little aluminum paint for a few basement pipes. The store had some in stock and the clerk offered a four-ounce can. It was enough for the job, the customer said—but then the hoarding instinct got the better of him.

"Got any more?" he asked. Yes, the clerk admitted he had some in the back room. "Well," said the customer, "give me half a dozen. How much? A quarter apiece? Then give me $2 worth. That's eight. Oh, while you're about it, make it an even dozen." So he walked out with twelve times as much aluminum paint as he needed, and before long eleven other customers may have to do without.

You can multiply that incident by tens of thousands. People who wouldn't think of taking things they don't need from people who do need them are doing it nevertheless, as surely as if they grabbed and ran.

Do-It-Yourself 'Service'

NO LONGER will most of the favorite restaurants serve in the former style. The dash with which the favorite waiter lifts the silver bell from the steaming plate, the gesture with which he gives the hungry diner a whiff of the glorious aroma and a glance at the beauty of the garnishings before he begins to serve, will soon be gone for the duration.

Buffet service is the order of the day. It grows and spreads from restaurant to restaurant. It's cafeteria style nowadays, and the diner carries and unloads his own tray and gets his own glass of water. For the present, at least, he need not gather up and wash the dishes.

Most Americans are good sports. Once they realize the necessity for doing things for themselves they rather enjoy it. They like the feeling of spending easy money when they have it, but they also enjoy being competent—and bragging about it.

As a part-time worker in a war plant King George of England accepts no pay—but he is understood to have other means of support.

HENHOUSE FULL OF CHICKENS, BUT NO EGGS

Attack Seen as Political Blunder

By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—The attack by certain members of the house of representatives on the four sons of President Roosevelt was a political blunder, from a psychological standpoint. Inasmuch as politics is a very psychological game, and far from an exact science, there is very little excuse for it.

This is not a defense of the Roosevelt boys, and anyone who contended that they had not been shown a bit of favoritism would be blinking at the facts. But what would anyone expect. People are human, and this goes for generals and admirals as well as for the man in the street.

No one is going to kick the dearly beloved son of the commander-in-chief around, whether the commander-in-chief in question be of the army and navy, or of the local garbage disposal plant. We can't change human nature overnight, and it is a serious question whether we would want to do so if we could, or whether any particular useful purpose would be served.

But observing a bit of favoritism, and screaming about it in public, if you happen to be a member of the opposition, is something else again. In the first place the gentlemen who attacked the Roosevelt boys might cast their minds back to the campaign of 1940.

Of all the campaign buttons bought by the public during that third term contest, close up to the top of the list was one which bore the slogan "I want to be a captain too." It was supposed to be very funny, and many Republicans not only got a chuckle out of it, but thought it was effective campaign material. Remember that this was when boys were being drafted.

But the point was that it didn't seem to matter when the voters were marking their ballots. It was the sort of thing which pleased men and women who were opposed to FDR ANYHOW, but it is highly doubtful if it changed a vote.

ADOLF HITLER is one of the authorities for the maxim in politics that if you say a thing often enough, some people will believe it. There is a good deal of truth in that, providing that each of the many assertions necessary to this consummation does not harm the propagandist.

It is the last point which makes ANY attack on ANY member of the Roosevelt family actually an asset to the president's political fortunes IF the attack is made by a Republican.

There is not the slightest doubt that these attacks on the Roosevelt boys made by persons at least suspected of having politics as their motive causes resentment in the minds of mothers and fathers who OTHERWISE might resent the alleged favoritism to the Roosevelt boys.

In short this is the kind of thing which the Republicans would be wise to leave to the natural internal combustion of parental minds.

In the last world war there was the same sort of sniping by certain Democrats at the sons of Theodore Roosevelt. It turned into a terrific roorback when Quentin was killed. If it should so happen that one of FDR's four sons should be killed in this war it would turn any partisan critic of these sons of the president into a vulnerable target for the rest of his political life.

That is not very important. But it is important that people don't like partisan attacks on the members of a political leader's family. People want to resent things without being shown a diagram by someone they believe is trying to profit himself by the attack.

A Farmer's Diary By CALVIN A. BYERS

Bungling

IN THE show window of our village weekly Star, I saw a half dozen sale bills—long colored sheets with large heavy headlines —"PUBLIC SALE"—the undersigned will sell at auction—three miles west, on old Finger homestead . . . horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, farm tools, hay, grain, chickens, household goods. Lunch on the ground by Ladies' Aid. . . . Terms cash." Then the names of the owner, auctioneer and clerk.

Two years ago such sale bills would have been a wholesome sight. Pearl Harbor, Singapore, Bataan, North Africa, the Solomons, have changed all this. Food from America to feed our armies overseas, to help our Allies, to feed hungry peoples whose land we have freed.

Now these sale bills are a mockery . . . a protest against the lack of vision in high places. A cry goes up from the land that the wheels that turn the most essential industry of this country have been stolen! But for the "farm bloc," all the alphabetical combinations would have pushed the tillers of the soil into oblivion.

Even now, with planting time only a few weeks off, the plans of the average farmer are necessarily vague. Confusion stalks the fields. Land owners are bewildered. If he plants a crop, what assurance will he have at harvest time? He cannot fence the pasture for his herd of milk cows and he does not have the power to plow additional land with horses. If he raises only what he did last year, he is unpatriotic. If he plants more than he can tend and harvest he may lose his capital and his land.

Faith is a basic asset in any industry. No one has more faith than a farmer. But when, through lack of understanding, the means of success are taken away, that is a real handicap—and how can he know that the same lack of vision won't show up again?

At one of these farm sales, tools went at double prices—even old tools. A roll of woven wire, 90 cents a rod. A tractor, mounted on rubber brought the ceiling price, with 20 farmers trying to bid. They put the names in a peck measure and a boy reached in and drew the lucky name.

I looked on this scene with pity for the farmer and with mounting anger at those who should know—and didn't. Another mistake like this might cost us the war!

Timely Editorial

Sensible Suggestion.

The suggestion by Secretary of Agriculture Wickard to the 48 state governors that older pupils in rural and small town schools should be released from classes to help spring crop planting is practical and sensible. It will not solve the problem of farm labor shortage, but it is one of a number of steps which must be taken toward the right answer.

There should be no general or indiscriminate exodus from schools to farms. Only those boys—and possibly some girls—who can serve their parents or other farmers usefully should lay down their books to plow, ride tractors or plant corn and potatoes.

In Ohio the fact should be taken into account that state aid for public schools is based upon daily attendance records, and not upon enrollment. The pupils excused for farm work should be counted "present" in the class rooms to prevent loss of support for the district schools.—Toledo Blade.

Washington Merry-Go-Round By DREW PEARSON

'Minute Men' of Civil Air Patrol Play Big Part In Battling U-Boats

(The brass ring, good for one free ride on the Washington Merry-Go-Round, is awarded today to the Civil Air Patrol.)

THIS BRASS RING goes not to one man but to 68,000 men and women. They are members of the Civil Air Patrol who have been fighting the war in little single-motor planes flying within the boundaries of the United States, and who carry the torch for the future of civil aviation in this country.

How long they will be allowed to carry that torch is the important question. At present they are orphans of the storm — carrying military responsibilities without military standing. They fight submarines, but they had to fight for weapons first. The army and WPB are slowly throttling them by refusing new equipment or repair parts. Thus in order to keep their gradually deteriorating machines going, the Civil Air Patrol is almost certain to be swallowed by the army.

The army has been wanting to take over because civilian fliers in wartime are considered a nuisance by the military—with justification in some cases.

Youths and Fathers.

BUT the owners of 25,000 private planes thought they had something to offer. The younger ones went into military service. Others, many being married men with families, organized the Civil Air Patrol, which for more than a year has been flying the coastal waters and maintaining a courier service throughout the United States.

These are the "Flying Minute Men." At first their submarine patrol was merely a spotting job. If they spotted a submarine, they were supposed to radio a shore base and then hover around waiting for a bomber to come to scene of action. But they had so many heartrending experiences, that they clamored for bombs of their own.

They would dart low over the water, discover a submarine location, radio to a shore base, hold the contact, hover and pursue—and then sometimes lose the prey because the army never came along with the bombs.

For months they called in vain for bombing equipment. War department insisted that no civilians are allowed to carry weapons, and thus the Civil Air Patrol should not be armed. The army would not even release life rafts, and as a result several CAP pilots have lost their lives on submarine patrol.

Finally the restriction was waived, and today these little single-engine planes carry small bomb racks, bombs, and bomb sights.

But they have not been allowed to reveal the success of their submarine patrol. War department calls it "military information," and insists that CAP shall say no more than that they have "attacked" submarines — without indicating the result.

Subs Sink.

BUT we can reveal that submarines spotted by CAP observers have actually been sunk. The authority for this statement is Major General Follett Bradley of the Army Air Corps, who also emphasizes that these "Flying Minute Men" have provided their own planes, tools, radios, and other equipment.

A year ago German submarines were sinking merchant ships within sight of the Atlantic coast. This brazen activity ceased after establishment of the Civil Air Patrol. The submarines were driven into deep waters, for the small planes, flying low and flying slowly, were able to do a better job of spotting than big patrol bombers which whizzed past the scene too rapidly for close observation.

Submarine patrol is the most dramatic, but not the most common service of CAP. Many a pilot never sees the ocean. CAP operates a regular scheduled courier service in the northwest which covers 21,000 miles a day. They carry parts for repair of larger planes. They carry registered mail, bearing the side-arms for protection of the mail. They fly food to crashed bombers, dropping it by paper parachutes from 100 feet or less.

Recently Thompson Products Co., of Cleveland, large manufacturer of airplane engine valves, broke a pump, and required replacement from a small pump manufacturer in Defiance, Ohio, which has no commercial airport. CAP courier service flew to Defiance, landed in a cow pasture, and three hours and 20 minutes later, the pump had been delivered to Cleveland and installed. The Thompson plant resumed operation.

At Point Pleasant, W. Va., an ordnance plant was marooned by flood waters. Factory workers cleared a parking lot, marked it off with strips of sheeting, and indicated wind direction by an arrow made with rice strewn on the ground. On this emergency landing field, CAP flyers brought in mail, food, and a chef to feed the hungry workers.

CAP to the Rescue.

AT COLUMBUS, Ohio, CAP, in response to an urgent call, during a flood, flew typhoid serum to the town of Gallipolis, and dropped the serum by parachute into a soggy golf course.

A bad freeze threatened the fruit and vegetable crops of a large Florida area the other day. CAP planes flew all night over an 8,000-acre tract of tomatoes, beans, and berries, keeping the air stirred up, and preventing a freeze.

In the far west, CAP pilots, who know the mountain passes, fly, as one Air Corps general expressed it, "not over the mountains but through them."

A four-motored army bomber made a forced landing at Baldy Peak, a 12,000 foot dome near Taos, New Mexico. One of the crew was killed. The CAP squadron from Alamosa, Colorado, kept the nine survivors supplied with food, clothing, cigarets, and emergency equipment until rescue was effected.

This is the spirit on which hangs the future of civilian aviation in the United States. If the army does take over the CAP, it will have the responsibility of preserving that spirit and that service.

Dave Boone Says:

THE LETTER WRITER of the year seems to be Congresswoman Clare Boothe Luce. That girl sure does make a monkey of the men legislators when it comes to taking a pen in hand.

To get so much respect and politeness in the same letter with so many wallops calls for real genius and the touch that only a clever woman has.

"Deeply alarmed by the many disquieting and even explosive circumstances . . . on the home front;" "protracted wrangling;" "muddling of the manpower commission;" "vacillating authority" and the unmistakable renunciation by the people of "the credo sedulously nurtured among the bureaucrats themselves that the great issues before the country are not the concern of their congress." Boy, did she throw things!

Well, the little lady's letter is the talk of the country and has Washington by the ears. Even if Mrs. Luce and the other freshmen legislators are as awed as she thinks when they face the president in that meeting in his office this week, it won't make much difference now.

* * *

Girls will be girls and when they get into congress all the boys will run second.

LIFE'S LIKE THAT

"First it was a car pool, and then they decided to fix it so as to include sugar, coffee, meat and fuel oil."

ERNIE PYLE Roving Reporter

"Dramatic" Element Lacking at Front, War Becomes Matter of Hard Work.

ON THE CENTRAL TUNISIAN FRONT—The other night I was sitting in the room of Lieut. Col. Sam Gormly, a Flying Fortress commander from Los Angeles. We were looking over a six-weeks-old copy of an American picture magazine, the latest to reach us here.

It was full of photos and stories of the war; dramatic tales from the Solomons, from Russia, and right from our own African front. The magazine fascinated me and, when I had finished, I felt an animation about the war I hadn't felt in weeks. For in the magazine the war seemed romantic and exciting, full of heroics and vitality. I know it really is, and yet I don't seem capable of feeling it. Only in the magazine from America can I catch the real spirit of the war over here.

ERNIE PYLE

One of the pictures was the long concrete quay where we landed in Africa. It gave me a little tingle to look at it. For some perverse reason it was more thrilling to look at the picture, than it was to march along the dock itself that first day.

"I don't know what the hell's the matter with me," I said. "Here we are right at the front, and yet the war isn't dramatic to me at all."

WHEN I said that, Major Quint Quick of Bellingham, Wash., rose up from his bed onto his elbow. Quick is a bomber squadron leader, and has been in as many flights as any bomber pilot over here. He is admired and respected for what he's been through. He said:

"It isn't to me either. I know it should be, but it isn't. It's hard work, and all I want is to finish it and get back home."

So I don't know. Is war dramatic, or isn't it? Certainly there are great tragedies, unbelievable heroics, even a constant undertone of comedy.

It is the job of us writers to transfer all that drama back to you folks at home. Most of the other correspondents have the ability to do it. But when I sit down to write, here is what I see instead:

Men at the front suffering and wishing they were somewhere else, men in routine jobs just behind the lines bellyaching because they can't get to the front, all of them desperately hungry for somebody to talk to besides themselves, no women to be heroes in front of, damn little wine to drink, precious little song, cold and fairly dirty, just toiling from day to day in a world full of insecurity, discomfort, homesickness and a dulled sense of danger.

The drama and romance are here, of course, but they're like the famous falling tree in the forest—they're no good unless there's somebody around to hear. I know of only twice that the war will be romantic to the men over here. Once when they see the Statue of Liberty, again on their first day back in the home town with the folks.

AND speaking of drama, I've just passed up my only opportunity of being dramatic in this war. It was a tough decision either way.

As you've seen, correspondents at last are allowed to go along on bombing missions. I am with a bomber group that I'd known both in England and elsewhere in Africa, and many of them are personal friends by now. They asked if I cared to go along on a mission over the hot spot of Bizerte.

I knew the day of that invitation would come, and I dreaded it. Not to go, brands you as a coward. To go might make you a slight hero, or a dead duck. Actually I never knew what I'd say until the moment came. When it did come, I said this:

"No, I don't see any sense in me going. Other correspondents have already gone, so I couldn't be the first anyhow. I'd be in the way, and if I got killed my death would have contributed nothing. I'm running chances just being here without sticking my neck out and asking for it. No, I think I won't go. I'm too old to be a hero."

The reaction of the fliers astounded me. I expected them to be politely contemptuous of anyone who declined to do just once what they do every day. But their attitude was exactly the opposite, and you could tell they were sincere and not just being nice.

"Anybody who goes, when he doesn't have to, is a plain damn fool," one of them said.

"If I were in your shoes I'd never go on another mission," another pilot said.

A bombardier with his arm in a sling from flak said: "You're right. A correspondent went with us. It wasn't any good. He shouldn't have done it."

A lieutenant-colonel, who had just got back from a mission, said: "There are only two reasons on earth why anybody should go. Either because he has to, or to show other people he isn't afraid. Some of us have to show we're not afraid. You don't have to. You decided right."

I put this all down with such blunt immodesty because some of you may have wondered when I'm going along to describe a bombing mission for you, and if not, why not. I'm not going, and the reason is that I've rationalized myself into believing that for one in my position, my sole purpose in going would be to perpetuate my vanity. And I've decided to hell with vanity.

PLANS 'UTOPIA'

gless War Veteran Wants To Help Soldiers.

OHANNESBURG —(AP)— Leg- Murrough De Burg Nesbitt, year-old South African, is plan- g a Utopian village for mained diers.

civilian, Nesbitt lost both his s, and was told he would be pled for life. He defied the bined verdict of thirteen doc- s, and, fitted with artificial s, learned to swim, ride, dance, golf. On one occasion he dis- carded his limbs and topped all South African high-dive records with a 78-foot leap into the sea. Today the only sign of disability is a slight limp.

Nesbitt claims that as he overcame all handicaps mained soldiers should be able to do the same. He aims to make his village self-supporting.

Iodine is derived chiefly from the salt deposits of Chile.

MANSFIELD SOROSIS HEARS MRS. GIBSON

Mrs. E. D. Gibson Talks On South American Music At Women's Club: George Porterfield Presents Violin Solos.

THE PROGRAM of the Mansfield Sorosis was presented by Mrs. E. D. Gibson, when the group met Tuesday afternoon at the Women's Club with Mrs. Bess Albright, as hostess. Mrs. Gibson spoke on "South American Music."

In speaking of South American music, Mrs. Gibson gave its sources and said that the geography and history of the country were necessary, to understand the music.

Much of Latin American music is a combination of Indian and African influence for its rhythem, and Spanish influence for the cultural part. Mrs. Gibson traced the European influence in classical music, and said that the religious influence of the Catholic church is also shown in this music.

Mrs. Gibson discussed the music of the individual countries and named several great musicians, who were products of South America.

The governments do much to develop music, according to Mrs. Gibson, by educating students and sponsoring great programs. Various types of dances and their origins were explained. The influence of South America has reached various sections of North America, and the radio is doing much for South America to interpret its music to us.

George Porterfield accompanied by Mrs. Marie Porterfield, played two violin solos illustrating South American music. His selections were "Gitanerias" (The Gypsy) and "Jurame" (Spanish tango) by Grever-Hartman.

At the business meeting, conducted by Mrs. S. D. Hoover, members voted to give contributions to the Ohioana Library Fund. The Sorosis reported 100% participation in the victory book campaign.

Crime Talk Given at Woodland P. T. A. Meet

The nation has nearly half a million persons locked in its penal institutions for violating rules of society and their rehabilitation is costing the public 14 billion dollars a year.

Arthur L. Glattke, superintendent of the Ohio Reformatory, told this to 80 members of the Parent-Teacher association of Woodland school at their regular meeting last night.

As for the reformatory in Mansfield, Glattke said, its population of 1,900 is the lowest in history and be attributed this decline mostly to the military draft and better opportunities for young men in industry. A rise in juvenile delinquency has caused a population increase in institutions for the rehibilitation of juvenile's, he said.

Five counties in Ohiio's 88 send 55 per cent of the inmates now in the reformatory, the superintendent pointed out, adding that the remaining 83 counties send 45 per cent.

Sixty-five per cent of the Reformatory's inmates come from broken homes, and homes where both parents are working. Their average mentality is 12 years.

In its rehabilitation program, the reformatory seeks to raise mentality to at least a sixth grade level; provides educational opportunities in its trade schools to equip inmates for skilled jobs when they leave; requires compulsory religious education; and provides new family relationships through its parental visitation program.

Preceding Glattke's address a program of songs was given by third and fourth grade pupils directed by Miss Helen Haskins and Miss Bernice Peoples.

It was announced that the P. T. A. will stage its annual waste paper collection late this month.

Orlo Smith, president, presided at the session, and Mrs. Paul Endriss was program chairman.

That Extra Something!

...You can spot it every time

ALL America values the extra service that the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps brings to the war effort. And Americans, too, set store by the simple things that help build morale.

Ice-cold Coca-Cola, for example, does a special job in refreshing folks. You know from experience that its taste is deliciously different. And Coca-Cola does more than quench thirst. It brings a delightful after-sense of refreshment that never fails to please. Choicest ingredients and 57 years of experience have helped make it the best-liked soft drink on earth.

An original creation to begin with, the taste, refreshment and quality of Coca-Cola set it apart. So make sure you get the real thing. There's no comparison.

It's natural for popular names to acquire friendly abbreviations. That's why you hear Coca-Cola called Coke. Both mean the same thing . . . "coming from a single source, and well known to the community".

Army needs come first. That's why you see plenty of Coke at Post Exchanges. In civil life, Coca-Cola being first choice sells out first, now that there's less of it in wartime.
